ANTI-AMERICAN.

That is the policy of this administration. Its very first act was to pull down the American flag in Hawaii after a successfully established government, recognized by all nations, had negotiated a treaty of annexation with the United States.

This act was wholly personal, without consultation with the treaty making power—the senate being in session at the time. And now we are informed that the queen, the tool of Great Britain, which government is seeking possession of the islands, is to be reinstated against the will of the people.

The whole administration seems to be run at foreign dictation. An "object lesson" has been given the American people at the instance of London bankers—and now a ways and means committee composed mainly of Democrats who are not business men are engaged in framing a tariff confessedly intended to favor British capital engaged in manufacturing.

It seems almost incredible that such should be the case, but if the people will only look at the facts they can see for themselves. And then New York is a foreign city and Wall street is its dictator. It is time to run up the American flag against an internal enemy. In the war Cleveland had a substitute who was a bounty jumper—but in this crusade against his country he has enlisted himself.
