THE most vigorous protest against ex-Senator INGALLS's programme of voluntary self exile or forced banishment from their native country of Americans of African descent has come and will continue to come from the South, from the very parties who, as Mr. INGALLS declares, have deprived the negro of his lawful rights and have made the South the "fittest earthly type of hell" for him. In the South the proposition to ship 7 millions of native born Americans to the jungles of Africa will be regarded as criminal and foolish, and the utterance of the sentiment coming from a Northern Republican will be further set down as an act of basest treachery to the negro. Mr. INGALLS's deliverance will be everywhere used in the South to show the black man that the Northern man is not and never has been his friend, but a treacherous enemy, who, having used the black man to fight his battles, now proposes to send him to the other side of the earth to get rid of his obnoxious society. If the number of negro Democrats is not largely increased by Mr. INGALLS's latest manifesto, then the negro intellect is duller than it has hitherto been believed to be.
