

HE IS WORRIED.

A Citizen Asks the Humane Society to Prevent Miss Squires Diving Into the Lake at Washington Park.

Some one who forgot to sign his name addressed a communication to Humane Officer T. S. McMillan yesterday, calling attention to the fact that Miss Madeline Squires intends repeating the perilous feat of diving from a fifty foot tower into the lake at Washington park next Sunday, and requesting him to prevent the attempt. The letter reiterated the statements of the newspapers regarding the narrow escape of the young woman last Sunday. The officer has not decided as yet what action he will take in the matter.

The fearless woman is much chagrined at what she considers a failure to fulfill her contract with the park managers last Sunday and is determined to repeat the performance next Sunday at all hazards.

She is training hard under the direction of Professor E. S. Ridgeway, the king of all the high divers, and says she will experience no difficulty in performing the daring feat successfully.
