

"The Fire Patrol."

A new sensational play, called "The Fire Patrol," will be seen at the Grand this week. It introduces a rapidly driven fire patrol and also represents a ponderous quartz crusher, under which the hero is placed with intent to kill. These and other episodes of realism enter into a play which is built on the conventional lines of melodrama, with a good sprinkling of mystery, adventure, romance and comedy. The company is said to be a good one.

The St. Felix Sisters.

At the Grand this afternoon the St. Felix sisters, Misses Clemantina, Henrietta and Charlotte, a family group well and popularly known to the stage, will appear in a border play called "Life in the Rockies." The play is one of the characteristic dramas illustrative of far Western life, much in vogue a dozen years ago. It has a sensational fire scene, some incidental features, including a crinoline dance and a drum majors' drill. The St. Felix sisters are especially clever in songs and dances, and should fill the requirements of such a play more than adequately. The engagement is for the week.
