

Owen Nugent's New Play.

Owen Nugent's new play, "The Seven Clerks," or "The Donouner," was presented at Dunning's Opera house last night to a large audience. The company was composed entirely of local talent. The following is the cast of characters: Claude Dernaud, rich miser, Owen Nugent; his servant, Simon, George Lake; Adolphe De Briancourt, a young nobleman, Edward L. Connell; Gustavus, his friend, Claude Woodmanseo; Larose, a merchant; the three thieves, John Brown, Sig. Matted and Hans, Clyde Baker, Robert Thorpe and Alfred Townsend; officers of police, Antoinett and Pierre, H. C. Sewell and George O'Brien; Victorine, the miser's daughter, Miss Nina Hanna.

The play concluded with a laughable farce, entitled "The Two John Smiths," in which the cast of characters was as follows:

Boy, William Peck; Lidia, Miss Nina Hanna; Maryjane, Mary Nugent; Landlady, Nellie Nugent; Old Smith, Mr. Owen Nugent; Young Smith, Edward Connell; Tom Fakin, Claude Woodmanseo; Tibbets, Alfred Townsend.

In the Lower Courts.
