

Emmet Dalton's Revolver.

Tom Callahan, sheriff of Montgomery county, was in the city yesterday, looking after some official matters. He says that last Monday his posse was in close pursuit of Bill Dalton's gang, down in the southern part of the county, and was only an hour behind the gang at the state line.

Sheriff Callahan carries a beautiful and costly revolver, formerly the property of Emmet Dalton, that was carried by the young man when he rode with his brothers, Bob and Grat, who were deputy marshals. The gun is a large sized Colt's, with a beautiful pearl handle, and, in the parlance of the frontier, has seven notches on the barrel, Emmet having been credited with that number of men killed before he became an outlaw. The number since that time is not clearly known.
